BULLOCH TIMES

AND
The Statesboro News
PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

D. B. TURNER, Editor and Manager.

SUBSCRIPTION, $1.00 PER YEAR.

Entered as second-class matter March 28, 1906, at the postoffice at Statesboro, Ga., under the Act of Congress March 3, 1879.

THURSDAY, APRIL 26, 1917.

A FEARLESS CHARGE.

The charge of Judge R. N. Hardman before the grand jury last Monday morning, especially touching the present prohibition law, was most fearless one, and met the hearty approval of temperance advocates as well as all law abiding people.

"The foes of temperance are responsible for the present drastic law," he declared. "The temperance people of the state formerly asked only for local option, and were satisfied with it. Had the liquor people submitted to its operation fairly, and not openly and persistently overridden its provisions, the local option law would never have been abolished. The violation of the law made stronger legislation absolutely necessary, and the law of 1907 was enacted. This was a good law and had it not been flagrantly violated, it would have been permitted to stand. But the liquor interests found a way to disregard it, and a stronger law was demanded. This made necessary the law enacted in 1916—the two quart law. Disregard of that law has made the present 'bone dry' law necessary. If its provisions are drastic, the liquor people are responsible for it. It is well high effective now, and I thank God for it."

And Judge Hardman is right. Those who violate law make stronger laws necessary. The two-quart provision was regarded as reasonable and just, recognizing the right of individuals to procure liquor in limited quantities, yet there were those who insisted upon violating the law. To forestall these, stronger law was necessary, which may be regarded as a hardship upon the individual who in good faith was content to observe the old law. If it be true that public sentiment must be back of a law to insure its enforcement, it is as true that sentiment is gradually and surely coming to favor the enforcement of our prohibition laws. The man who justifies himself in violating the law because he and his neighbors do not approve it, will find that his conduct inevitably leads to still more stringent laws, if such be possible.

THE MIGHTY HAVE FALLEN.

When Tom Hardwick was a candidate for the United States Senate against a number of capable and worthy Georgians three years ago, a plea in which he excelled in his campaign was that the administration at Washington needed him. "I am in perfect accord with the senior Senator, Hon. Hoke Smith, and with your honored President Woodrow Wilson," he declared from the public platform.

"To send one who is not in sympathy with the administration to Washington would bring discord and friction. Send me and insure harmony."

And the first important matter which came before the Senate, the matter of government operation of vessels to insure the transportation of American products to Europe, he fought Senator Smith and President Wilson and lined up with their republican adversaries. Scarcely a matter has come up since that time in which he has not declared his independence of the administration and shown himself an obstructionist.

It should not have been desired of him that he should be a mere puppet in the administration's hands, yet his constituents had a right to believe from his own words that in the main he would co-operate in important matters. It transpires now, however, that he regards himself a bigger man than the administration. With the brazenness of a second rate politician he has declared his opposition to the appointment of Congressman Park or Judge U. V. Whipple to the United States Circuit Court solely because he had not been consulted about the matter. "I have no objection to Judge Whipple personally, nor do I question his fitness," he says, yet he objects to his selection by the department of justice because he has another choice.

The law places in the hands of the President this appointment, and permits the Senate to concur or object to the appointment. It would be supposed that broad reasons should exist when the Senate refused to concur. Yet Mr. Hardwick cops back because he had not been consulted about the matter. "I have no objection to Judge Whipple personally, nor do I question his fitness," he says, yet he objects to his selection by the department of justice because he has another choice.

Great co-operation this! What has he done that should put him in such disfavor that the President should be unfriendly with a worthy man on his account? It is really difficult to believe that he could think the President would permit himself to be governed by such motives, even though the Senator admits that he is himself.

Verily the mighty have fallen in his own esteem!

CONSCRIPTION.

If it were left to the people to say whether or not they should have war, the verdict would be against it. Our people love peace and justice as opposed to strife and wrong. If it were possible to settle the matter by a vote—to say at the polls that war should not be thrust upon us—if it were possible to avoid it honorably—then there would be an end to the struggle so far as Americans are concerned.

And those who argue against the proposition of the President and his advisers to raise a creditable army through conscription, argue from the viewpoint that the conscript is not a war. "What are we about to fight for?" eloquently asks one. "Who has done anything to make us fight? Has anybody imposed upon us?" And he answers his questions to his own satisfaction that there is no cause to fight. But the answer is not correct, and the issue is not properly stated. Something has been done to us. Somebody has imposed upon us. Our premises have been invaded and our rights trampled under foot; the high seas, which are ours by every right of the nations are being usurped by an enemy and we have been challenged to stay off them under penalty of death. Our subjects have been slain and our property destroyed in places which they had a right to be, and where no one had a right to say them nay. This is something to us—this is how we have been wronged, and this is why the President and his advisers—our representatives—have declared that we are at war with Germany.

How does it come to us then to say that we need not fight? How shall we say that it should be optional with any man to say who shall serve his country, and how and where? Do we thus support our country in times of peace—it is optional with us whether we shall pay our taxes into the treasury? Are we asked whether we shall give our time to the courts in administration of justice? Do we say, printing press in competition with him, and which is paid to print the bulk of complimentary advertising which the printer is called upon to circulate, yet he is regrettably informed no funds are available for him.

Around at the postoffice he is glad to accept whatever service he can get even for he has paid for it, and every time the moon changes or something transpires which will offer a semblance of an excuse, postage rates and box rent are advanced to him. He boasts for city mail delivery for his town for the benefit of the public, and when it comes, the postage rates are advanced to him. He is to double his burden by placing postage upon service which has heretofore been handled without expense and which is in no wise affected by the installation of the new service, yet there is no fund available to pay the postage. Many persons suffer from kidney and bladder trouble when they can be relieved. Backache, dizziness, rheumatic pains, stiff or sore joints and other symptoms lead to Foley Kidney Pills—Sold by Bulloch Drug Co.

On Saturday, March 5, 1917, the death angel took away a dear and beloved friend, Rev. M. K. L. L. He was about 21 years old. Oh! how we will miss him in the days that are to come! We can only think back to the time when he was and he was kind hearted and greeted everyone with a smile, and all who knew him loved him. He was far away from home when he was called, and no one knows how he suffered in his last hours. I doubt not he thought the time would soon come when he should return to his home, but he did not. Oh! yes, he is now home, but not that on earth for which he so fondly yearned. We know that far away beyond the skies there is a home prepared for him, and though the world be filled with sorrow and our hearts burdened with grief, yet we know that Jesus will take our burden away, and if we trust in Him as we should we shall meet him over there where there is no death.

TO KEEP MILK SWEET
If you do not use ice try the following: Take a plate, half half-filled with water and invert a saucer in plate. Wrap a medium sized wet towel around bottle and set on saucer letting lower part of towel extend down into water. Set plate in a shady windy place. The evaporation will keep temperature fifteen degrees or more.

Immediately after milk is delivered pour out what you expect to use for breakfast and fix bottles as above on ice. Don't let cook keep milk in a hot kitchen for a couple of hours and then expect it to keep good and sweet.

BURDENED PATRIOTS.

A certain amount of patriotism is expected of every citizen of the United States. The man who is not loyal to his country is not deserving of its benefits. Some are in position to give greater scope to their patriotism than others, and do so gladly.

Loyalty by word of mouth is cheap, yet it helps some. The giving of actual service is more valuable, however, in some cases.

Why the government should expect greater service from one man than another, however, or why it should accept it without compensation, is difficult to understand. Yet it does.

Paid departments in Washington, employing stenographers and typewriters at a living wage, are constantly kept busy dispatching to the newspapers of the country material of only a semi-public nature to be given free publication if the publisher is patriotic enough. A note attaches which apologizes for the fact that no provision is made for the payment of such matter, therefore the patriotism of the publisher is invoked.

Funds are provided to pay for the preparation of the matter in Washington. A department head, employed at a salary which the average publisher would be started at, is supplied with a coterie of underlings whose hours are short and whose labors are light. Funds are provided for all this from the people's treasury, yet nothing is available to pay the publisher to place the information sought to be disseminated, before the people for whom it is intended. The publisher works more than the governmental eight hours per day, pays his own house rent, light and water bills, printers' hire, paper bills, and postage on the newspaper in which this free information is asked to be distributed, yet no funds are available to compensate him in any measure, he is regrettably informed.

The national government takes from the printer the job of printing envelopes without charge for the printing, sends them free through the mails to the customer who patronizes this government print shop supported by the people at a loss for operation. The printer helps to pay the expense of operating the government printing office which does the printing, sends them free through the mails to the customer who patronizes this government print shop supported by the people at a loss for operation. The printer helps to pay the expense of operating the government printing office which does the printing, sends them free through the mails to the customer who patronizes this government print shop supported by the people at a loss for operation.

Large and attractive colored posters adorn the walls of the average postoffice calling public attention to this or that matter deemed of sufficient merit to spend good money in placing them far before the public eye. Yet the printer has received a modest little duplicate of the same circular with request that it be given free space, because there has been no funds available from which to pay for its publication.

Recruiting officers come and camp about the court house squares seeking men to serve in Uncle Sam's army—they come singly and in pairs; on trains and in automobiles—somebody pays for this, yet the printer gets a modest little request to advertise the wants of Uncle Sam along this same line without cost because there are no funds available from which to pay for its services.

One's patriotism is sorely taxed when he ponders upon these things, and it need not be wondered at that many printers feel justified in feeding to the waste basket a large amount of the perfectly good looking literature along these various lines which Uncle Sam's paid army of copy manufacturers are kept constantly busy supplying.

OPPOSES CONSCRIPTION.

Editor Bulloch Times:

In your issue of last week I see at the mass meeting held in Statesboro the other day, several citizens voted to instruct our representative in Congress to vote for conscription to meet the demand of the nation in case of war with Germany. Now according to my judgment, this is a wrong view. In the first place it would be unnecessary, for hundreds of thousands will volunteer and an army of volunteers would be worth more than twice that of the conscripts, and in the second place, it would cripple the production of food supplies for the army.

I have been in one war and I know some few things that younger men don't know. If conscription was adopted many of our best farmers of the nation would be taken, and old folks and free negroes and free white boys would be insufficient to supply the army with food. This is my view of the subject, and I think I am right. Especially would I hate to see a Yankee conscript officer down south assigning our men to commands they would not like to join.

When the Southern States seceded and formed a confederacy they called for volunteers to defend their territory against the invasion of the Northern States, and her boys responded liberally and for over two years held their enemies in check against two to one in every battle. But after the Confederate army became somewhat depleted, and the opposition having access to other nations for recruits, then the Confederate congress passed the conscription act, and the result was that the food supply was not enough for the conscripts, and the conscripts were not enough to meet the demand.

This is my view, and I think I am entitled to express it as well as others.

Respectfully,

B. W. DARSEY.

Had Trouble For Four or Five Years.

No one appreciates good health more than I do. I was ill for four or five years. I had been bothered with bladder trouble for four or five years. It gave me great deal of pain. I took different medicines, but nothing did me any good until I got Foley's Kidney Pills. I have been free from kidney and bladder trouble when they can be relieved. Mr. H. I. Waters was stricken with paralysis on Saturday afternoon and is now confined to his bed. We wish for him a speedy recovery.

Mr. J. L. Clifton is now at the sanitarium in Statesboro, having gone there for an operation. We trust that he will soon be well and back with his home folks.

Mr. Arthur Porter is at home on a furlough from Macon for several days.

Mrs. Carrie D. Williams, of Scarborough, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Porter and family for several days.

Miss Ruby Porter and Mr. John Morrell, of Egypt, were visitors here Monday.

Several from here attended the Sunday-school institute in Statesboro Friday and Saturday.

Mrs. D. Barnes, of Statesboro, is here for several days with her father, Mr. H. I. Waters, who is very sick.

Miss Lorine Mann and little Julia Quattlebaum spent the week-end at Brooklet the guest of Miss Mann's parents.

Messrs. W. E. Porter, L. E. Mingledorf and Ralph Mingledorf, of Egypt, were the guests of Mrs. B. F. Porter last Friday.

Did you ever go a-fishing? Well, if you want to enjoy a real good old time "fishing for love" come to our school building Friday evening May 4th, at eight o'clock and see "A Fisherman's Luck" presented. It will be something worth while and will play in the midst of laughter, or will play deeply upon your sympathetic nature all the while. A few readings, and good music will complete the program. You'll miss a treat if you fail to come to our school closing.

It is with deep regret that we will soon have to bid Miss Lorine Mann good-bye but we wish for her a bright and happy future.

FARMERS OF BULLOCH TO HELP FOOD CRISIS

AT MEETING IN COURT HOUSE PUBLIC SAFETY COMMITTEE IS NAMED.

In response to a call from the governor of Georgia and other authorities, a mass meeting was held at the court house on Friday, April 27th, to discuss the food situation and to arouse the people of Bulloch county to the importance of larger production of all the staple food crops.

Short speeches were made by J. W. Williams, R. Lee Moore, A. M. Deal and W. F. Whitley.

Mr. Williams was made chairman of the committee, and W. F. Whitley, secretary. A motion was made to let the chairman appoint the committee, and
